MEET STEVE NASSAR

From Leads to Legacy

BY KERRY HINRICHS

Steve Nassar has never approached real estate casually. From the beginning, he built his business with growth in mind—focusing not only on sales but on the systems, relationships, and structure needed to sustain long-term success.

One relationship in particular helped shape Steve's trajectory in business and leadership. Steve first met Mike Hickman while playing basketball at a local gym. After Steve was laid off from a previous career following the attacks of 9/11, he went to work at Paradise Harley-Davidson, where Mike served as general manager and became an early mentor, teaching him foundational sales principles that continue to shape his approach today. Steve remained at Paradise Harley-Davidson until 2003 before entering the mortgage side of the business, where he worked from 2003 to 2010. He later earned his real estate license in 2012.

Years later, after Mike retired from Paradise Harley-Davidson in 2019, he earned his real estate license and joined Steve's team—a full-circle moment that still stands out in Steve's story.

Even in the early stages of his real estate career, Steve was thinking beyond a solo operation. He immediately built a team structure around him, bringing on a full-time transaction coordinator and hiring dedicated marketing support from day one. That organization has since grown into a 24-person team made up of agents and operational staff.

One of the defining turning points in Steve's business came in 2018. At the time, his team was heavily focused on buyers and spending nearly $50,000 per month on Zillow leads. Rather than continue down the same path, Steve made a significant pivot—cutting ties with Zillow and repositioning the business around listings and the luxury market.

His strategy paid off.

The transition required more than simply changing lead sources. It meant repositioning the business, refining the client experience, and building a stronger listing infrastructure designed to support higher-end properties and sellers. Over time, the team became increasingly known throughout the metro market for its listing-focused approach and luxury presence.

Today, the team manages approximately 50 to 60 listings at a time, with at least half priced above $1 million. Much of that business is concentrated in the southwest metro communities Steve knows best, including SW Portland, Lake Oswego, West Linn, Tigard, Tualatin, Wilsonville, and Sherwood.

Steve has lived in Lake Oswego for the better part of 23 years and remains actively involved in the community, including supporting Oak Creek Elementary School. Relationship-building also remains a major part of his business philosophy. As an avid golfer and member of Tualatin Country Club, he has generated 8 clients resulting in 12 transactions through those relationships last year alone. Outside of real estate, Steve enjoys spending time with his daughter, Georgie, and especially loves the opportunity to share his passion for golf with her whenever they can get out on the course together.

Steve's consistency is supported by an extensive client database of more than 5,000 contacts, along with ongoing client appreciation efforts ranging from Oregon Zoo promotions to winery partnerships, Valentine's floral collaborations, and more.

Behind the scenes, Steve is equally focused on operational discipline. Each year, his team dedicates an entire day to reviewing and refining both their buyer and listing transaction systems—mapping the process from the initial client conversation through closing while maintaining detailed checklists for every stage of the process. Each touchpoint is carefully evaluated, documented, and refined to create consistency for both clients and team agents. That systems-driven mindset has become a defining part of the team's growth, particularly as the business has expanded further into the luxury market. For Steve, strong operations are not separate from client experience—they are a critical part of delivering it at a high level.

From mortgages to luxury listings, Steve has spent more than two decades leading the industry while building a business centered on systems, relationships, adaptability, and high-level marketing. Today, that approach has positioned him and his team as a significant presence in Portland’s luxury market—and they’re just getting warmed up. 🏡

Simply Chiki

NO LOOSE ENDS
BY KERRY HINRICHS

There's a point in nearly every real estate process where multiple moving parts need to align. At that stage, vendors, timelines, and details must all work in tandem.

That's where Chiki steps in.

Before launching Simply Chiki in 2025, Chiki Nussbaumer spent 23 years at Wells Fargo in roles built on trust, attention to detail, and accountability. That experience ultimately led her to build something of her own. The result is a service that is more personal, more responsive, and fully focused on execution.

Today, she works alongside real estate professionals as a true extension of their business, supporting the moving pieces surrounding a listing with organization and control. From preparing homes for market to coordinating vendors and overseeing repairs and deliveries, she helps keep everything aligned and on track.

While much of her work happens behind the scenes, its impact is unmistakable.

"Chiki has truly become an extension of our team without the overhead of adding a full-time hire. It's been a game changer," says Hailey R.

That level of trust is built through consistency, follow-through, and an attention to detail that ensures nothing has to be revisited.

When Chiki steps in, she understands she's not simply completing tasks. She is stepping directly into the client experience and holding it to the same standard as the agents she supports.

Her work doesn't stop at closing. From moving coordination to home organization and ongoing support, she brings continuity to a process that can otherwise feel fragmented. The result is a seamless experience from start to finish.

Clients feel the experience immediately. The entire process becomes calmer, more organized, and thoughtfully handled at every step.

Outside of work, Chiki enjoys traveling, spending time with family, and hiking throughout the Pacific Northwest.

Deeply rooted in the community, she is an active member of the Lake Oswego Chamber and has long been involved as a mentor with Big Brothers Big Sisters.

As Simply Chiki continues to grow, Chiki's focus remains clear: build intentionally, operate at a high level, and deliver a service that allows agents to perform at their best while their clients experience something truly exceptional.

ANDREW MISK

AGGRESSIVELY
EXCEPTIONALLY

BY KERRY HINRICHS

Twenty-four years into his real estate career, Andrew Misk can still point to a decision that changed the course of his life, even though it didn't feel particularly career-defining at the time.

Fresh out of college, he was working in Seattle's mortgage industry when his girlfriend, Cami, was accepted into graduate school in Portland. The choice that followed wasn't particularly complicated.

"It wasn't exactly an ultimatum," Andrew says with a laugh. "But the choice was pretty clear."

He packed up, moved south, and began looking for opportunities in the city where he grew up. At first, he assumed he would continue working in lending. As he started reaching out to local contacts, however, one conversation sent him in a different direction. A local agent suggested he should get into real estate, and he hasn't looked back.

Andrew feels fortunate to have worked with some industry titans over the years. Along with serving as a managing broker, he has seen many facets of the industry, and those lessons eventually led him to launch a brokerage with friend and mentor Dirk Hmura.

"Launching The Agency has been one of the most challenging—and most rewarding—chapters of my real estate career," he says. "Dirk and I make a great team, and bringing The Agency brand to Portland has genuinely been fun. Seeing our vision for a collaborative, connected culture take shape in our offices is what makes all the hard work worth it."

Dirk and Andrew's partnership runs deeper than business. They grew up on the same street in Cedar Hills, and their families have known each other for decades. "Starting a company requires a different level of trust," he says. "Because of our long history and the connection between our families, all the usual worries just fall away."

Before real estate, Andrew's own professional experience had been somewhat less inspiring. His first job out of college involved selling phone lines to businesses, a role he remembers with good humor.

"I think I lasted about six months," he says.

Fortunately, real estate proved to be a more solid fit.

Andrew eventually found himself navigating one of the most difficult markets in modern history. When the housing market collapsed in 2008, many agents struggled to survive. Traditional sales became harder to find, and much of the business that remained involved short sales, foreclosures, and bankruptcies.

For Andrew, avoiding that work wasn't really an option. He had a young family to support, so he learned the process, developed the expertise, and took on the work many others preferred to avoid.

The clients he served during those years weren't looking for a bigger home, a different neighborhood, or a dream kitchen. Many were facing financial hardship and difficult decisions about their future. The conversations were heavier, the transactions were more complicated, and the stakes felt much higher than in a typical sale.

"The connection and appreciation I felt from clients during that time was unlike anything else in my career," he says.

“IF YOU MAKE IT THROUGH FIVE YEARS, YOU’VE PROBABLY SEEN BOTH A GOOD MARKET AND A BAD ONE. THAT’S WHEN YOU REALLY START TO UNDERSTAND THE BUSINESS.”

Looking back, Andrew describes those years as some of the most meaningful of his career because helping those clients required far more than simply getting a deal done. The people sitting across the table weren’t comparing floor plans or debating paint colors. Many were trying to figure out how to move forward after life had taken an unexpected turn and helping them navigate those situations left a lasting impression.

“It was one of the most rewarding chapters of my career,” he says. “And one I’m perfectly happy not to repeat.”

Outside of work, family is where Andrew spends most of his time and energy. He and Cami recently celebrated 22 years of marriage and are raising three boys: identical twins Torin and Josiah, who are 19, and their youngest son, Lochlan, who is 9. Their Golden Retriever, Hank, keeps the household busy as well.

When he isn’t working, Andrew enjoys fly fishing, golfing, hiking, and camping. While many people talk about hobbies as if they’re training for a championship, Andrew takes a different approach.

“I keep waiting for some hidden talent to reveal itself,” he says. “So far, nothing.”

Instead, he describes himself as “the most aggressively average fly fisherman, golfer, hiker, and camper you’ll ever meet.”

After more than two decades in the business, Andrew’s advice for newer agents is surprisingly straightforward.

“Commit to the first five years.”

New agents often underestimate how long it takes to gain traction, which is exactly why Andrew encourages people to stick with it.

“If you make it through five years, you’ve probably seen both a good market and a bad one,” he says.

“That’s when you really start to understand the business.”

If he could offer one piece of advice to his 18-year-old self, however, it wouldn’t be about sales, marketing, or negotiations.

It would be about organization.

“Be maniacal about using a CRM,” he says with a laugh.

Client follow-up never ends, and the reward for doing good work is often more work.

More than two decades later, Andrew remains grateful that he made the move. What began as a decision to support someone he loved ultimately led to a career he never planned, mentors who helped shape him, and a community he has been proud to serve for nearly a quarter century.

CONNECTED FOR GOOD

Our CONNECTED FOR GOOD event was one to remember! While we've hosted charitable Real Producers gatherings before, this was easily our most entertaining yet. Together, we raised more than $1,500 for SMILE Oregon, making the evening both meaningful and memorable.

Guests enjoyed a delicious spread of summertime refreshments in a stunning backyard poolside setting. The highlight of the event was a fun performance by magician and mentalist Johnel Crux, whose incredible illusions and mind-blowing cards had everyone captivated.

A heartfelt thank you to our Presenting Sponsor, Tammy Wittren of RATE Mortgage, along with our supporting sponsors, Nick Metke of Metke Remodeling and Shari Poindexter of Window Genie, for helping make this event special.
